JAMES C. TREADWAY, JR., BECOMES 61ST SEC COMMISSIONER; BEVIS LONGSTRETH SWORN IN FOR REAPPOINTMENT

James C. Treadway, Jr., became the 61st member of the Securities and Exchange Commission in ceremonies held at Commission Headquarters on September 13, 1982. He was given the oath of office by Chairman John S.R. Shad, filling a vacancy created when Philip A. Loomis, Jr., retired in June. His five year term expires June 5, 1987.

Bevis Longstreth, who first became a Commissioner July 29, 1981, was also sworn in by Chairman Shad yesterday. His current term expires June 5, 1984.

At the time of his appointment, Mr. Treadway, 39, was a partner with the Washington and New York law firm of Dickstein, Shapiro & Morin, where he has been associated since October 1, 1972. During the past 15 years he has been engaged in a broad securities and corporate finance practice, representing corporate issuers, officers and directors. In addition, he has represented a U.S. and a foreign securities exchange, investment banking firms and investment companies. He is the author of various articles on the federal securities laws.

Mr. Treadway, a native of Anderson, S. C., was formerly an associate with the Washington and Boston law firm of Gadsby & Hannah from 1968 to 1972 and prior to that, he was an associate of the Atlanta law firm of Candler, Cox, McClain & Andrews from 1967 to 1968. Mr. Treadway received his undergraduate education from Rollins College and the University of Georgia where he graduated in 1964 with an A.B. degree. He received his LL.B. degree, summa cum laude, in 1967 from Washington & Lee University where he was Editor-in-Chief of the Washington & Lee University Law Review. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Order of the Coif and Omicron Delta Kappa.
